He Wanted to Teach.

CUMMING, GA. Nov. 10.—The public-school system of Georgia is an impover-ished institution. It contracts with its teachers for a term of sixty-five days at five cents per day per capita, and settles with them at about sixty-five cents on the dollar. The teacher must accept this or persuade the kind-hearted patron to pay the remainder. Any one enjoying the lu-dicrous can spend a healthful half hour at certain of these examinations, espec ially when the commissioner, as in this ease, possesses a natural vein of humor. The applicant was a man of about 40, with a cheap east of feature and a body balf as broad as long. He said he didn't claim to know all-wasn't a graduate, etc., but he did know enough to teach them heathen down at Shake Rag, cause he'd teached there four years, and they didn't know nuthin yit. The official said he'd ask a few primary questions, and began with:
"What is a letter?"

"A thing creeked sometimes and some-times 'taint."
"What is a syllable?"

"Hits a word split in two."

"How many parts of speech?"
"Three—coarse, fine and superfine,"

'Hit's suthin' that tackles onto suthin'. or shows that suthin tackles onto hit.

What is reading?" "Hit's talkin' from a book." 'How do you teach reading?"

"Sometimes by coaxin' and sometimes by a board." "What is geography?"
"Hain't no classes in that."

"But you might have, How would you

"By askin' 'em questions."
"What are the fundamental rules of arithmetic?"

"Funda what?" "Fundamental rules."

"Don't know him."
"I had no reference to an Individual, meant the principal rules of arithme

"You mean the way how?" "Yes."
"Can't jis' remember."

This of course is an exceptional subject of ignorance, but the public school teachers in the Georgia backwoods are not proverbial for their much learning. There are some good schools, however, and this county has two or three of a higher grade. The high school here is presided over by a clever young lawyer—a Georgian and a gentleman of cultivated taste.

THE RAILROADS PARALYZED.

A Lucky Runaway-Jailed For Forgery-Suing a Rallroad- A Quiet Wedding-Other News of the Bluffs. The Storm. Business was nearly at a standstill in the city all day yesterday on account of the terrible storm. The streets were nearly deserted and no street cars were running. The dummy trains were also abandoned, and mail trains, with the ex-Electric door bells, burglar alarms and ception of the "2" and Kansas City & Council Bluffs, failed to arrive. The Rock Island train was blocked near Weston and the St. Paul train was stalled at Templeton. Altogether it was the worst November

Yesterday an omnibus team at the Rock Island depot became frightened and ran away. In the course of their hasty flight they struck a hack, badly damaging it, and also collided with a mail wagon, doing considerable damage. Fortunately, however, no one was injured and the frightened team was captured without much difficulty.

Jailed For Forgery. O. P. Webster, who was arrested at Crescent for forging the name of H. A. Terry to a note at that place, was brought to this city yesterday to await the action of the grand jury, and was lodged in jail.

Suing a Railroad. Yesterday George Heaton commenced suit against the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy railroad company for $300 damages which he claims to have sustained by the burning of a shed. He alleges that the building was set on fire by a spark from a passing locomotive.

driven into the child's coffin. THREE MEN FROM GEORGIA. An Interesting Romance Which Would Be True if It Were Not Fictitious. In 1863—June of that year—three con-federate soldiers serving in the army of Virginia returned to their homes in Famini county, on a furrough of thirty days each, says the Atlanta Constitution. They were men of no education and with-out patriotism. They had entered the army "for the fun of the thing." A year's service taught them that fun was an unknown quantity in the army, but instead, that there were great hardships and constant danger of loss of life. At the expiration of the thirty days granted them by their furlough they agreed that they would not return to the army. In other words, they determined to desert. Fannin county is a mountainous re gion. It, therefore, not difficult for the three deserters to so hide themselves as to be entirely out of the way of officers sent in search of them. They remained in hiding until the war ended.

The subsequent history of these deserters was singular. Their names were Thomas, Bowman and Watts. were unmarried. From 1865 to 1875 they remained in Fannin county, most of the time manufacturing illicit whisky. In June of the latter year they were sur-prised by a party of revenue men in a distillery situated in a mountain gorge. They were brought to Atlanta, where ey were tried upon the charge of illicit distilling and were convicted. Each was sentenced to serve a term of two years in the Albany, N. Y., peintentiary. In June, 1877, the three deserters, now ex-convicts, were liberated. Thomas obtained work on a Hudson river steamer. Bowman enlisted in the United States army, and was sent west to fight Indians. Watts went to Florida, where he obtained imployment as a brakeman on a railroad. In June, 1878, Thomas married an Irish woman who lived in New York City. About the same time Bowman married a squaw of the Apache tribe of Indians, Watts in the the same month and year, married a Cuban woman, whom he met in Jacksonville. The degree of education possessed by the three wives was about the same as that possessed by their hus-Living so widely apart, it never occurred to the three ex-convicts that they would ever again meet. But in June, 1879, Thomas was employed by the owner of a St. John's river steamer to go to Florida. At the same time Bowman's command was sent to St. Augustine. While passing through Jacksonville they met Watts. The three ex-convicts determined to celebrate their reunion by a panquet, which was provided for them by the keeper of a cheap restaurant. Their wives joined them at the banquet, at which great conviviality reigned.

The next morning the the wives of the three ex-convicts died very suddenly. The ice cream they had eaten at the banquet had poisoned them.

It was in June, 1880, that the three exconvicts met again. Jacksonville was the place. They were on their way to Fannin county. Each had heard that the few acres of land he owned had suddenly become of great value, by reason of the discovery of gold. They traveled together, each full of wonderful plans for the future. When they reached Fannin county they discovered that what they had heard was untrue. They were bitterly disappointed, naturally, and to console themselves set up a distillery and proceeded once more to manufacture llicit whisky. It is not known how long the three exconvicts remained in Fannin county, but in June, 1881, they were living in Chi-cago. They then disappeared and were heard of no more until June, 1886. On the 4th of that month an explosion occurred in a small house on a back street in Chicago. The occupants of the house, hree men, were killed. Police investigation developed that they were engaged in the manufacture of dynamite at the time of the explosion, presumably for supplying the anarchists. The owner of the house said that he had rented it to the three men whose names were Thomas, Bowman, and Watts.

three miles from where the debtor did business, they found but a solitary cab, to which all rushed. Three got in and re-fused admittance to the fourth, and the cab started. The fourth run after and got upon the outside with the driver, asked the driver if he wanted to sell The driver replied that he did not went to do; that he was not worth more than $50, but he would not sell him for that. He was asked if he would take $100 for the animal, "Yes," said Jebu. The fourth man quickly paid over the money, took the reins and backed the cab up against the bank, slipped it from the harness and tipped it up so that the door could not be readily opened, jumped upon the horse's back and rode off at a quick lope, while the insiders were gazing out of the window. He rode to a lawyer, and had a writ made out and served and his debt secured, and got around to the hotel just as the "insiders" came up puffing and blowing. The cabman soon bought back his horse for $30. The "sold men" offered to reimburse the fortunate one, who had found property sufficient to pay his debt, if he would not "let on"

Horace Greeley's Blunder.
The Journalist: Mr. Greeley was a queer character, and could be funny when he liked. He was one of the originators of the American Institute, and naturally took a deep interest in its wel-fare. When the annual exhibition was in progress the Tribune was full of it. Sometimes Mr. Greeley took a hack at it himself. Though a strictly temperance man he one day astonished the staff by writing a paragraph on the wine exhibit, saying it included port, sherry, claret, Cliquot, Mumm, Roederer and champagne. The staff were laughing over the old gentleman's blunder, when he came in and asked the cause. The slip of his pen being pointed out, Mr. Greeley remarked in his squeaky voice: "Wa'al, I'm about the only man on this paper who could make such a d-d foolish mis take as that." The multiplication of gin mills and their attendant throngs of drunken "bummers" around the Brooklyn end of the bridge is actually driving passengers from that highway back to the ferry, as-serts the New York Tribune.

A person who defrauds another of his money by selling a spurious article is bad enough; but when he injures health by his trickery he is a monster. Beware of the imitations of the "Garland Stoves and Ranges' and preserve your health

From the Omaha Bee:

Mr. J. H. Butler, of Hazel Dell. Pottawattamic Co., Iowa, and his family of eleven persons, were all sick with malizmant diphtheria. Every one of them have recovered by the lase of Dr. Jefferis Preventive and Cure for Diphtheria, without the aid of a physician.

C. H. Blakeslee, of No. 1419 Campbell street, Omaha, who recently lost a beautiful and interesting daughter, aged about 15 years, by diphtheria, under the trealment of one of the best physicians in Omaha, writes to Dr. Jofferis, of this city: "Your reme by for diphtheria came too late, our dear daughter was dying when it was received. I am saushed that her life could have been saved. Another one of our children who had the diphtherm, her throat was filled up with the purid ulceration, we used your medicine and in twelve hours the disease was completely subdued. In the future we will keep your medicine at all times in our house. We feel that it saved the life of one of our children. We are very thankful to you, and only regret that we did not call on you sooner."
